MASHINGTON, April 11 Fig Peest-dent has for some time been accumulating information from official, semi-official and private sources to enable him to form a j ist conception of the actual condition of adairs in Cube Outside of Havana at the first-class perts of Cardenas, Clenquegos, Matanzas, Agua Lagrande and Santiego, we have consular officials at these points contain much valuable information which it is not deemed "compatible with the public interests" to make public at this time, as called forth by the recent resolution of the House of Representatives.

There are also a number of American capitalists in Boston and elsewhere, who where they did not obey this contain much valuable interests and public at this time, as called forth by the recent resolution of the House of Representatives.

There are also a number of American capitalists in Boston and elsewhere, who own Cuban plantations and have their American managers on the Island Promithes one much confidential information has been and is being received. With all these sources for obtaining the facts open to the admitistration it has never been contamplated at any time to send General S hoffeld or any other amy of ficer to Cuba to investigate and report. The President and Secretary Othey have felt that they were getting at the facts in a much fibre satisfactory way than by sending a special commissioner and when they have received all the information obtainable, and not it (then, will there le any consideration of the champions of the man howe and Filteroft was badly pummelled. vessatton of Excitement in Cuban

Dane

Washington, April 13 A careful carry as of the House of Bi presentatives saturday showed a complete ces with not excitement over, the Cuban situation the sympathy of the members was obviously with the linsurgents, but some sary to rouse the members to action again The most general expression of opinion on both sides of the chamber was that Congress had done its duty in adopting by an overwhelming vote the resolutions declaring that the insurgents are entitled to beliggerent rights

Having done this and the matter now being in the hands of the President it was deemed better to leave it there While not openly expressed there was a fucit admission by many of the conspicuous leaders that the House would be acting unfairly to the President in adopting a point resolution of belligerency which it would be mandatory upon him to opprove by veto it was not doubted if a pointe resolution came before the House it would pass, though by a manority much less than that riven the cy which it would be mandatory upon him to approve by reto it was not doubted if a joint resolution came hefore the House it would pass, though by a majority much less than that given the Senate resolution a week ago. The belief was expressed by members who would oppose such a measure that it could be carried through the House over the President a velo. One gentle mun did not agree with his associates as to the President a probable action. This was Mr. Hitt, of Illinois, chairman of the House Foreiga Affairs Committee, who was prominent in several Cuban debates. Mr. Hitt regarded it likely that the President would, within a reasonable time, Issue a preclamation recognizing the builtgerency of the Cubans but did not base his opinion upon any information he had received. Mr. Hitt referred to enormous majorities with which the first resolutions passed the House and said after a month, when every member had had time to hear from his constituent, he resolutions again passed the House and said after a month, when every member had had time to hear from his constituent, he resolutions he would have communicated them to Congress Phe President had reasons and facts fatal to the spirit of the resolutions he would have communicated them to Congress Phe President had reason and facts fatal to the spirit of the resolutions he would have communicated them to Congress Phe President was too sensible not to appreciate that circumstatice.

Mr. Patterson, of tebnessee, a strong administration man, said "My idea is that the action of the problem and the President will ether the other problem and the President was forcer and the President of the solution of the problem and the President will ether the other pr vard in the direction of the solution of he problem and the President will either leaue a proclamation or furnish reasons for not so doing."

Mr. Draper or Massachusetts, who issue a proclamation or furnish reasons for not so doing?"

Mr. Draper by Massachuaetts, who has continually deprenated any suggestion of interference in Cuban affairs, did not believe the Fresident would issue such a proclamation, and he did not think is likely that Congress would act further in the matter if the President allowed it to remain in ubeyance.

"I do not thick Congress will take further action on this subject," said senator Hale, off Mane, who was one of the most determined opponents of the passage of the resolutions in the Senate "Congress has done all it consistently can do in the matter and it now rests with the President to act as he may deem proper.

with the President to att as he may deen proper.

'No eneran prevent the introduction in the Benate of any or nill sorts of resciutions, but they would only express the individual opinion of the Senator, who introduced them and if pushed to a vote could not possibly pass. No attempt to push a joint resolution could possibly secreted.
